“Business is a very beautiful mechanism to solve problems, but we never use it for that purpose. We only use it to make money. It satisfies our selfish interest but not our collective interest.”

.... Muhammad Yunus

Social entrepreneurship is about creating and leading organizations to apply business and management techniques to resolve social problems. Rather than leaving societal issues and needs merely to the government or business sectors, social entrepreneurs take an active role with strong commitment to lead social changes for a better society. This forum aims to facilitate exchange of views by experts from academia and industry to help participants develop a social enterprising mindset and acquire insights for creating value for the society.
